

Zachary Zaluski, Industrial Development Manager – Ohio, Norfolk Southern Corporation

Zachary Zaluski began his career at Norfolk Southern in 2014 while studying Civil Engineering at Southern Polytechnic State University. After graduating in 2017, he joined the company full-time as a management trainee in Atlanta, Georgia.

He progressed through several engineering roles, including development engineer in Indianapolis and planning engineer and senior planning engineer in Atlanta, covering multiple states across the Midwest and Southeast. He later became group manager of technical services, leading the engineering and GIS teams within the Industrial Development Department.

In 2024, he transitioned to his current role as industrial development manager for Ohio, based in Columbus, where he continues to support economic growth and industrial expansion.